A GUIDE TO MAPPING SURVEILLANCE CAMERAS

1. enlarged map of area; every street should be named and clearly visible.
2. a pencil with eraser (mistakes are inevitable but can be corrected).
3. system for categorizing cameras; either by ownership of building (private, city, state, federal), or by camera technology (1st, 2d or 3rd generation), or both.
4. go slowly, be patient, but don't linger; do one side of the street at a time; don't try to spot cameras across the street.
5. look up, not up to the sky, but diagonally, up to the second floor, and also across, to things at eye-level; there's no need to look down, except to watch where you're going.
6. Globe cameras are sometimes part of buzzer/intercom systems; look horizontally for tell-tale dark glass or plastic bubble facing the street.
7. Make sure to look at and underneath all canopies, door-ways and other areas above entrances.
8. To warrant placement on the map, a camera that's placed inside a building must be positioned inside a window and looking out at the street, inside an entrance or loading dock and looking out at the street, etc.etc.
9. at the intersection, look up at all traffic lights, poles, lamps, etc. for red-light enforcement cameras or traffic flow-monitoring cameras.
